PEACEKEEPING MISSIONS

Canada's role as a peacekeeper throughout the world began in the 50's when Lester Pearson, Canada's ambassador to the UN suggested that the organization might create a peace keeping force. This force could be injected into a war or conflict area in order to maintain a ceasefire while the respective combatants negotiated an alternative solution to fighting. Canada is known throughout the world for its readiness to contribute troops or support to peace keeping missions and has participated in more missions than any other country in the world. *

The role of the United Nations supplying forces to keep the peace was first suggested by Mike Pearson, (Canadian Prime Minister) when he was serving at the UN as Canada's representative. This idea was not only adapted but has become one of the central fixtures in UN activities throughout the world. Pearson was awarded a Nobel Peace Prize for the inspiration and Canada has become the most important and respected player in Peace keeping duties, for the UN, throughout the world.*

REACTIONS TO CANADA'S MALI PEACEKEEPING MISSION

Globe and Mail—OPINION

By Aisha Ahmad

Aisha Ahmad is an assistant professor at the University of Toronto, director of the Islam and Global Affairs Initiative at the Munk School and author of Jihad & Co.: Black Markets and Islamist Power

As Canadian troops prepare for their new deployment to the war-torn country of Mali, much has been said about restoring Canada's reputation on the world stage. But on the ground, the restive northern deserts of Mali will present a formidable challenge for our forces. Three key things make Mali the deadliest peacekeeping mission in the world.

To start, most of Mali's armed groups fall into one of two major coalitions: the pro-government Platform and the pro-separatist Coordination of Azawad Movements (CMA). Both of these coalitions are comprised of ethnic factions fighting over the spoils of a future negotiated settlement. Although Platform and CMA have officially signed a fledgling 2015 peace deal, the factions within these coalitions regularly fight each other, splinter and switch sides.

Some of Canada's allies frustrated with how Liberals announced Mali peacekeeping mission

By Lee Berthiaume, The Canadian Press

OTTAWA — Diplomats from some of Canada's closest allies are quietly expressing frustration with how the Trudeau government handled this week's announcement that it plans to send military helicopters to Mali.

The news that Canada had finally committed resources to the peacekeeping mission was greeted with relief-tinged applause, but diplomats — speaking on condition of anonymity given the sensitivity of the matter — say the government has failed to explain that the mission is both necessary and that the Canadians will be relatively safe, compared to the thousands of other peacekeepers working across the country.

They fear the government has allowed incorrect information to spread unchallenged, threatening to undermine Canadian public support for what they say is a critical contribution to the UN peacekeeping effort.

CHALLENGES OF PEACE AND WAR

A Community Conference
 CO-Sponsored by the Calgary Association of Lifelong Learners (CALL) &
 The Ploughshares Calgary Society
 Saturday, May 5, 2018, 9:30 a.m.-3:00 p.m.
 Varsity Acres Presbyterian Church, 4612 Varsity Dr. N.W.

Given conflicts in the Middle East and elsewhere, as well as the horrifying possibility of nuclear war, it seems appropriate to take stock and consider alternative solutions to serious conflicts. World politics is shifting, requiring the deployment of different strategies in conflict zones. The program will explore shifts in world politics and specific successes and failures in Canadian peacekeeping and nonviolent conflict resolution.

PROGRAM

Conference Presenters

Mark Ayyash is an Assistant Professor of Sociology and Director of the John de Chastelain Peace Studies Initiative at Mount Royal University. His teaching and research focus on social and political theory, the study of violence, decolonial movements, as well as culture and politics in the Middle East, particularly the Palestinian-Israeli struggle. In addition to several academic articles, his co-edited book (with Ratiba Hadj-Moussa), Protests and Generations: Legacies and Emergences in the Middle East, North Africa and the Mediterranean, was published in 2017. Mark organizes a Lecture Series and the Annual Calgary Peace Prize Ceremony. He has recently developed a Minor in Peace and Conflict Studies at Mount Royal University.

Doreen Barrie is an Adjunct Assistant Professor in the Political Science Department at the University of Calgary. She has written on Canadian and Alberta politics, health care, federalism and environmental protection. She is currently researching issues on water, particularly water markets

Trudy Govier is a founding member and currently Chair of the Ploughshares Calgary Society. She taught philosophy at the University of Lethbridge, retiring in 2012. Trudy is particularly well known for her work in informal logic and argumentation: the 7th edition of her book, A Practical Study of Argument was published in 2012. She has also written widely on issues related to violence and conflict resolution, including A Delicate Balance: What Philosophy Can Tell Us About Terrorism (2002), and Taking Wrongs Seriously: Acknowledgement, Reconciliation, and the Politics of Sustainable Peace (2006). In recent years, Trudy has facilitated a number of Interest Groups for CALL.

Rob Huebert is an Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Calgary, where his research and teaching focus on Canadian foreign and defence policies, circumpolar relations, and international relations and strategic studies more generally. In addition to numerous articles on these subjects, his publications include a co-edited book (with H. Exner-Pirot, A. Lajeunesse & J. Gulledge), Climate Change and International Security: The Arctic as a Bellwether, 2012.

Abe Janzen served as the executive director of the Mennonite Central Committee (MCC) Alberta for 21 years, retiring to Donor and Church Relations in the fall. He has travelled to the Palestine-Israel region multiple times and is passionate about working for peace. Before beginning with MCC Alberta, Abe and his wife served with MCC in Bolivia for 10 years. He is originally from Saskatchewan, where he studied adult education. He blogs regularly at some-messynotes.wordpress.com.

Madelyn MacKay is a peace activist who lived in Calgary in the 1970s and is now living in Nelson BC, where she co-teaches in the Unarmed Civilian Peacekeeping program at Selkirk College. Selkirk is the first school in the world to offer this Nonviolent Peace force training for peacekeepers. She recently participated in the UN Commission on the Status of Women with the Voice of Women for Peace delegation.

George Melnyk is Professor Emeritus of Communication Media and Film at the University of Calgary. In addition to his work in Canadian literary history, film history, and Western Canadian identity, he has written widely on peace issues from a Canadian perspective. His work in the area of Peace Studies includes the co-edited volume, Canada and September 11th: Impact and Response (2002) and the edited volume, Canada and the New American Empire: War and Anti-War (2004). George has also facilitated a number of Interest Groups for CALL.

Major John Vintar has served in a number of positions in the Canadian army since enlisting in the early 1980's. In 2015-16, he was deployed to the United Nations Mission in South Sudan, where his tasks included protecting civilians, investigating human rights abuses, supporting the delivery of humanitarian aid, and supporting the conditions of tenuous ceasefire agreements.
